

leaders and are encouraged to take advantage of the many opportunities to be good leaders.

The cultural values that have produced the greatest nation on earth are rapidly vanishing from memory, and a whole new generation is being indoctrinated into liberal ideas. It is imperative that youth be trained not only to know what are good ideas but also to know why and how to implement those ideas to change the world and shape the future.

What is LTIA?

“Stop the bleeding!” is the cry from parents and youth leaders. Youth are the life blood of our culture’s future. But thousands of young people are being captured by liberal agendas and thinking. America’s life’s blood is being drained out of its conservative population. Too many times we hear of young people returning from college and declaring that they reject everything that they were raised to believe. Too many hearts of parents have been broken. When will it stop?

Fortunately, the Leadership Training Institute of America (LTIA) has been at the forefront of the battle for youth. LTIA has been training youth since 1996 in world view warfare, which equips them to defend their beliefs and to understand why traditional, conservative values are vital to a free and secure society.

The Leadership Training Institute of America (LTIA) is a cultural think tank providing training and opportunity in leadership development and cultural dynamics. Youth are encouraged to apply and excel in leadership and critical thinking skills, study world view conflicts and strategies, network with outstanding leaders, and pursue careers in influential sectors of society.

founded in 1996, namely to: identify, inspire, and instruct students for world view leadership.

LTIA alumnus Marian Ward credits LTIA as the essential training she needed to, “pray the prayer heard around the world in Sante Fe, Texas.” She says, “LTIA prepared me to deal with national press coverage, to speak on Good Morning America, and to stand by my convictions in spite of law suits and other attacks by groups such as the ACLU.” Marian is so convinced of the significance of what LTIA is doing that she is presently serving on the LTIA staff.

University of Arkansas co-ed, Kyndall Kovach, used her LTIA training to respectfully stump her liberal professor in class with questions that he admitted he was unprepared to answer.

LTIA is leaving a tremendous impact on students and has gained national attention and commendation for our efforts from our national leaders such as former U.S. Senators John Ashcroft and Steve Largent, U.S. Senator Kit Bond, U.S. Representative Roy Blunt, and former Representative J.C. Watts. Other nationally recognized leaders such as Cal Thomas, Dinesh D’Souza, former attorney General Edwin Meese, Morton Blackwell, and Panamaian ambassador Guillermo Ford have also praised LTIA efforts.

LTIA trains students from all over the world including Russia, Panama, and Brazil. Our annual national program takes place in Washington D.C. This is the perfect place to inspire young men and women to be great leaders. Surrounded by the sights and sounds of America’s heritage, students are challenged with the need for good
